Annex A

Management of the release of Bar Council papers

1. It is impossible to issue reports and not expect the press to be interested. This is a healthy situation and must be recognised. The following recommendations should ensure avoidance of most problems:
  - a. The committee, panel or working group producing a report must make it clear whether the purpose of the report is consultation, recommendation or implementation;
  - b. Its status should be clear, i.e. whether it is a report of a panel or working group for consultation, or a report to a committee of the Bar Council or a report by a committee to the Bar Council or a report of the Bar Council. This list is not exhaustive;
  - c. It should be clear to whom the report is being sent and for what purpose;
  - d. In consultation with the Bar Council's Communications and Marketing Team, consideration must be given by the authors to the publicity for such a report and whether to issue a press release covering the report or hold a press conference or do nothing. Consideration must be given to the timing of publicity in the light of the need to inform members of the Bar;
  - e. The GMC should be informed as a matter of course of the production of the report and should be informed and approve in conjunction with its authors or working group the timing and distribution of the report; (See paragraph 2g below.)
  - f. Reports to be issued to the press should be distributed through the Bar Council's Communications and Marketing Team and must be given a clearly marked embargoed date;
  - g. Guidance on press enquiries and handling the press should be provided by the Bar Council's Communications and Marketing Team.
2. Consideration must be given to the scale of the management task which depends, inter alia, on the following:
  - a. The size of the document;
  - b. The distribution list;

- c. The lead time for printing, collating and binding a document which can be carried out in house or by a commercial printer;
